History of Madison-Bouckville Antique Week & Madison-Bouckville Promotions

By John Mancino, president, Madison-Bouckville Promotions

Fifty years ago this August, Jock Hengst and a few of his friends got together on an abandoned airfield on Route 20 in Bouckville to swap some antiques. From that humble beginning has grown New York State's largest outdoor antique event.

After a few years the event was moved to a cornfield on Rte. 20 and continued to prosper. As the event grew, many full-time antique stores sprang up along Rte. 20, and the towns of Madison and Bouckville became known as antique communities. Many of these stores started hosting their own shows running concurrent with Mr. Hengst's.

When Mr. Hengst sold his show field to a farmer several years ago, there was concern that the show was over. When I heard the news I knew something must be done to keep this show alive. I went up and down the street and organized all the antique stores, show fields, restaurant owners, and innkeepers. We all got together in one room, and with the help of Madison County Tourism formed Madison-Bouckville Promotions. We are a non-profit group consisting of over 70 members. Monies raised from dues are used to advertise Madison-Bouckville Antique Week. We also increased the length of the show to one full week, and added an annual Antiques Weekend in June, with many of the August showfields participating.

Today, we are proud to say that we are the single largest revenue generator in Madison County. We estimate we have over 60,000 visitors in one week, and sell out every hotel room in the county.

PatsPots and Antique Articles in Bouckville Antique Pavilion

BOUCKVILLE, NY – Patti Bourgeois and Sandie Fowler once again will join forces for the August Madison-Bouckville (M-B) show. Both have participated in August M-B week since 1990, starting in the Big Field. This year, PatsPots and Antique Articles will be selling together on the Antique Pavilion field under one large 20 x 50-ft tent.

Patti will be selling fresh, newly acquired collections of American Arts & Crafts art pottery and vintage Flemish art pyrography items from the turn of the last century, along with Japanese woodblock prints, including traditional ukiyo-e and shin-hanga, as well as some modern sosaku-hanga style prints. Sandie will offer antique Art Nouveau tiles and vintage metal bookends from the early to mid-century periods, along with a wonderful selection of vintage colorful German mid-century fat lava-glazed pots. In addition, they will have a fun and affordable selection of art pottery for the new collector! Look for the "POTTERY" and "ANTIQUE TILE" signs on the tent.
